

6516205731.txt

NAB's attempt to block content on XM satellite radio is ridiculous. AM and FM broadcast stations should improve their content and compete for listeners rather than use the government to put the competition out of business. With the current state of consolidation in the radio broadcast market there is no reason that the same technology that XM uses to deliver radio programming via satellite can't be used to broadcast similar programming from numerous earthbound broadcast antennas.